THIRTY PICKEREL

Weighed 39 Pounds—Caught by William M. and Charles E. Franklin and Frederick E. Shumway.

William M. Franklin, Charles E. Franklin and Frederick E. Shumway have again sustained the reputation of the members of the Bohemian club for being crackerjack knights of the rod and gun by bringing in the finest string of pickerel that has been shown in Danielson. They made a stunning catch of these fish at Bowditch meadows, where they were allowed to fish by permission. There were thirty of the fish and they weighed just an even thirty-nine pounds. The largest fish in the lot, caught by William Franklin, weighed four pounds and one-quarter. The next heaviest one weighed three pounds and one-quarter and the next three pounds. Fifteen more of the fish in the string weighed a pound to two pounds. Altogether there was enough of the fish in the lot to feed the 100 members of the Bohemian club, if they had been allowed to eat. Every one of the fish was a beauty. When placed on exhibition in the window of a local barber shop they attracted the attention of about every man, woman and child that passed. This is not another instance of a miracle of the rod and tackle, but a real, bona-fide fish story. The gentlemen had the goods and gave the people an opportunity to look them over. It was a great catch by a great trio.

SLASHED WITH RAZOR.

Workmen on Sewer Quarrel—One Cuts the Other—Held in $1,000 Bonds.

A slash with a razor in the hands of Luigi Particeni, 30, opened two wounds in the head, near the ear, of Eduardo Dattilo, 39, when the men engaged in an altercation at their boarding place on Broad street, late Tuesday night, that sent the injured man to the hospital. The woman, Betsy Wilcox, near the corner of Broad and Carter streets. The version of the story given out by the police is that the cutting affair grew out of a dispute between the injured man and another workman as to which could do the more work. After arguing the matter, the other party to the quarrel was struck on the head with a bottle by Dattilo, and then Particeni mixed in with his razor to help out his friend.

Particeni denied that he had cut Dattilo when Chief Pilling went to the lodging place to make the arrest, but he was taken into custody. It was learned later that Particeni had also pulled a gun on members of the boarding place party after he had been seized. Chief Pilling found that the man was carrying a revolver, and relieved him of it; also securing the information from the prisoner that he had drawn it to protect himself.

Dattilo's wounds start from the crown of the head at the back and follow a diagonal course down across the neck and lobe of the ear, along the cheek to a point near the chin. The flesh was laid open to the bone and one could lay two fingers side by side in the side of the scalp. It was after midnight and Wednesday morning before the man's wounds were dressed.

A hearing for Particeni was fixed for two o'clock Wednesday afternoon, but it was necessary to continue this proceeding until two o'clock next Monday afternoon, as Dattilo was unable to appear in court. Judge Beech fixed the prisoner's bond at $1,000 in default of which he was taken to Brooklyn jail. Particeni denies that he did the cutting.
